DOCUMENTS

Generally, we use Hypertext Markup Language (HTML) to create pages and documents which are accessible to people who use screen reading software and to those with other vision or mobility impairments.

Our website also contains Adobe Acrobat PDF (Portable Document Format) files. We use this method when documents are not available in digital form, are too large or difficult to produce in HTML, or are publications where the format is critical to the usability of the document. Adobe Systems, Inc. is developing products designed to make PDF documents more accessible. Adobe's accessibility web pages describe their efforts.
